

I believe that this proposal to allow transmitters equipped with appropriate "smart transmitter technology" to eliminate interference of TV broadcasting is sound. Allowing low-power transmitters to operate using this technology can improve online business, and allow those with no access to traditional wired internet services to take part in online affairs. This is just good business sense. The more people we have conducting online business, the faster the online sector will grow.